

Missionaries Not Harmed

"Wonderful peace of my Saviour," sang two Southern Baptist missionary wives while Skyraiders roared overhead and troops of the South Vietnam government attacked to wrestle control of Da Nang, Vietnam, from dissident forces on Sunday morning, May 15.

"The sermon, 'Faith, the Way to Peace, Victory, and Stability'—prepared the week before when everything was calm—and the special music could not have been more fitting," says Mrs. Ronald D. Merrell, Sr., one of the missionaries. "I don't know whether the sermon helped the others who worshiped with us that morning, but we missionaries fell back on it the rest of the day!"

That was the first of eight days of struggle in Da Nang and uncertainty and dangers for the missionaries.

Two Southern Baptist missionary families are stationed in Da Nang — Mr. and Mrs. Merrell (of Tulsa, Okla.) and their two children, and Rev. and Mrs. Lewis I. Myers, Jr. (of Boyle, Miss.), and their four children.

All had been evacuated to a nearby U. S. military base in April because of fighting in Da Nang but had been permitted to go back to their homes on April 22. Three weeks of "perfect quietness" had followed their return, says Mrs. Merrell. And Mr. Myers had gone to Saigon to try to get a car for the "two families on one Honda."

On that Sunday morning the other missionaries and the children went to the press center, down by the Da Nang River, to conduct worship. A U.S. Marine photographer, a Baptist, had started services three weeks earlier, and before leaving the city he had asked the missionaries to continue the work. Though they learned at the center that troops had landed in the night, they went on with the scheduled meeting.

Tension mounted throughout the day. Turned back from another meeting, the missionaries went home, passing soldiers, hospital trucks, and hastily built forts.

"As soon as we got home, we began packing," says Mrs. Merrell. "We had been caught unprepared before and didn't want that to happen again!"

As the Merrells finished dinner, the fighting began. They found what they hoped was a "safe wall" and got behind it. At their home in the center of town, Toni Myers and her children "stowed away in the hall and wished Daddy were home."

Detroit Opinions Varied

By The Baptist Press

"Routine . . . significant . . . untroubled . . . worshipping . . . flat and uninteresting . . . important . . . interim . . . harmonious . . . quiet . . . successful . . . dull and weak . . . good . . . calm and determined . . . issueless . . . smooth."

With these words, editorials in a score of Baptist state weekly newspapers described and evaluated the 100th annual session of the Southern Baptist Convention meeting recently in Detroit. (May 24-27)

The editorials seemed to have one point of common agreement — that the convention steered clear of controversy and dealt with the business in a calm manner. Few of the editorials were agreed on whether or not the Detroit convention was a "good" one.

Just as the editorials disagreed over whether or not it was a good convention, they also were not in full accord over which issues and actions were most significant.

Most of the editorials said that one of the most significant things the convention did was to launch plans for the Crusade of America, a vast evangelistic campaign slated in 1969 when Baptist groups in North, Central, and South America join hands in one big evangelistic effort.

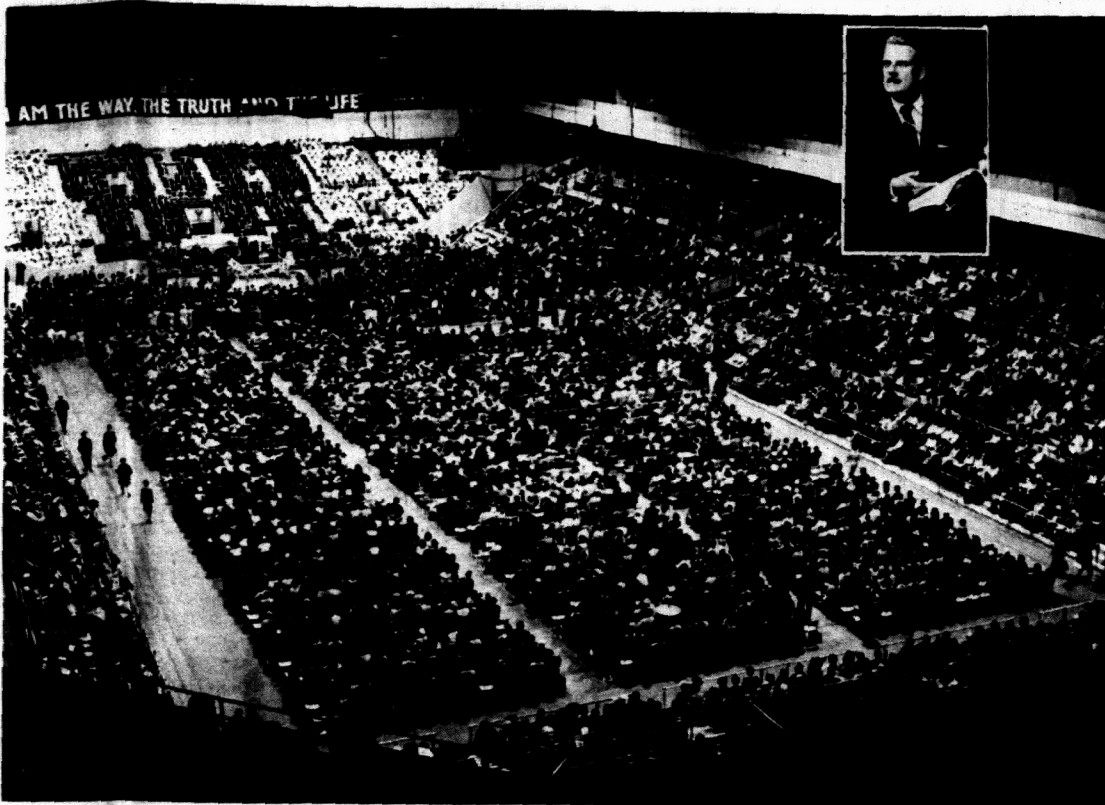

Some of the state Baptist papers said that the spirit of the convention was more significant than the action taken.

Commented the Oklahoma Baptist Messenger in a typical statement: "Having passed through a long period of criticism, controversy and self-analysis in recent years, the convention this year gave its primary emphasis to missions and evangelism."

What the convention refused to do could be more significant in the long run than what it did do, said an editorial in the Texas Baptist Standard.

Citing examples, the Standard said the convention refused to censure a Baptist minister (White House Press Secretary Bill Moyers) for dancing the watusi; refused to consider a resolution opposing a seat in the United Nations.

CHALLENGED BY THE EVANGELIST to accept the way of salvation offered by a loving and unchanging God, 734 persons walked to the front of Earls Court Exhibition Hall during the Greater London 1966 Crusade. More than 2,000 people came as inquirers the first four nights.

LONDON CRUSADE—

Crowds Greet Evangelist

LONDON — When evangelist Billy Graham opened the thirty-two day Greater London Crusade at Earls Court Wednesday night, June 1, a capacity audience was met with a ringing challenge to their faith.

The crusade was described in the Daily British Press — that boasts the largest circulation in the world — as the who filled the big area below the battle here in this great metropolitan city of sixteen million people, according to crusade officials, is not being waged with guns but with the power of God against the working of Satan.

Huge crowds have continued since the first night with the weekend audiences overflowing the eighteen thousand foot arena. About six thousand participated in the service Saturday night by closed circuit television. The twenty-five by eighty foot cinema screens are located in large adjoining rooms in this vast hall where the crusade is meeting nightly except Sunday.

Invitation

Without music during the invitation the first four nights, a slow shuffling tread of feet formed the only sound, more than two thousand have come forward to receive Christ openly. Opening night saw three times as many people making decisions than the first night of the Harringay meeting twelve years ago here in London. Hundreds nightly brave the stares of thousands to make the long walk in this sports arena turned cathedral in what some call the "greatest decision of their lifetime."

After Graham had told the vast opening crusade crowd to set "a moral and spiritual tone for the rest of the world that so desperately needs your leadership," a man in an orange sweater went first at the time of decision, then middle-aged women with cardigans over summer frocks. A mother walked hand-in-hand with her teenage daughter. There were young men wearing the latest fashion, a pretty girl in a scarlet dress, a scholarly looking man with a brief case and a balding minister with clerical collar who, one thought, surely had no need. In complete silence, with Mr. Graham standing with his closed right hand touching his lips and head bowed in prayer, the stream of humanity continued with old men and women, younger ones, and children.

And there was a sprinkling of brown faces among those as well as Negro men and women who represent the small minority of this country's population.

Quite Note
The meetings end on the same quiet note, with those who come forward filling out to a counseling room to receive literature and personal help from one of six thousand trained counselors. "This is far beyond our expectation," said Billy Graham after the

COLLEGE AID—

Court Ruling Analyzed

WASHINGTON (BP) — A Maryland court ruling that grants to three church-related colleges are unconstitutional runs up "a bright red flag for many who are now making policies for education," according to a Baptist leader here.

C. Emanuel Carlson, in an analysis of the recent decision by the Maryland Court of Appeals concerning sectarian colleges, said that denominational educators "will need to study the Maryland opinion with care." Carlson is executive director of the Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs, Washington.

The case involved direct construction grants totalling $2½ million by the Maryland legislature to four church-related liberal arts colleges.

A Maryland Circuit Court in 1963 ruled that the grants were "valid" and "constitutional." The Court of Appeals decision overturns the lower court ruling.

"The highest court of Maryland has now ruled that the grants to an institution are secular or sectarian depending upon the nature of the institution involved," Carlson said.

The grants went to the College of Notre Dame of Maryland in Baltimore and St. Joseph College in Emmittsburg, both Roman Catholic schools; to Western Maryland College, Westminster, a Methodist school; and to Hood College, Frederick, Md., affiliated with the United Church of Christ.

Of the four, only Hood College was found to be eligible for the grant. The Methodist and Roman Catholic schools were held to have received unconstitutional grants from the state of Maryland.

The Maryland court took its stand on its own reading of the U. S. Supreme Court's interpretations of the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the U. S. Constitution.

The case is being appealed to the Supreme Court and might be accepted by it for review. Refusal of a review would amount to an approval of the Maryland reading.

With the provision of federal grants to public and private institutions under the Higher Education Facilities Act of 1963, the Maryland case could have sweeping effects.

Baptist colleges and state Baptist conventions are seeking guidelines concerning the federal funds being made available to private schools. A number of Baptist schools

Stetson Declines Federal Aid Delay

DeLAND, Fla. (BP)—The board of trustees for Stetson University here has turned down a request from the Florida Baptist Convention's State Board of Missions to delay accepting a federal grant until after completion of a state Baptist study on separation of church and state.

Trustees for the Baptist school issued a statement here responding to a resolution adopted in April by the Florida Baptist State Missions Board asking the school to delay accepting the federal grant until after November.

In their statement, the trustees said that any attempt to postpone the decision "would have caused the university to lose more than $200,000 in gift money."

February Decision
In February, the private Baptist school decided to accept a federal grant of $200,000 to reduce the amount of a $1.2 million federal loan on construction of a new science building.

The trustees' decision came during the midst of a one-year study by a special Florida Baptist Convention committee on the church-state separation implications of acceptance of federal grants and loans by Baptist institutions.

The committee is scheduled to report on findings of its study Nov. 8-10, 1966, during the Florida Baptist Convention in Pensacola.

"The trustees of Stetson regret that it was necessary to decide whether to accept or reject the available federal grants before the special Florida Baptist Convention committee had completed its study," said the statement issued by the school's trustees here.

SBC Gifts: $26.3 Million During First Five Months

NASHVILLE (BP) — More than $26.3 million was given to Southern Baptist Convention world missions causes during the first five months of 1966, a monthly financial statement from the SBC Executive Committee here has revealed.

Southern Baptists gave $9,725,772 to missions through their Cooperative Program unified budget plan, and $16,634,278 to designated Southern Baptist missions causes from January through May of 1966, the report stated.

The total SBC missions contributions represents an increase of $2.4 million (10.07 per cent increase) over missions gifts for the same five month period of 1965.

Cooperative Program budget contributions have increased $575,076 or 6.28 per cent over budget contributions

A Surprise At Sinai

By W. Douglas Hudgins
Message delivered at Southern Baptist Convention in Detroit.

Sinai is thought of by many as one of the Holy Places of the Old Testament. Associated with it are the dramatic episodes of the beginnings of the Hebrews as God's covenant nation. There, as God began to work out His redemptive purpose for humankind, Moses met with Deity, the people received their commission, and the Ten Commandments were given.

It was at Sinai, barely three months after their deliverance from bondage in Egypt, that a dispirited and unorganized band of former slaves were fashioned into "a kingdom of priests and a holy nation" (Ex. 19:6), and empowered of the Almighty to be the heralds of freedom to the peoples of all the earth.

As Sinai glows afresh in our recollection, we see the dazzling brilliance of the glory of God; we tremble in awe as the lightning flash, the thunders roll, the wind shrieks, the mountains rumble in their quaking, and the roaring fires blast heavenward with the smoke of a furnace; we listen with bated breath as a Divine Voice gives the Ten Commandments; and, as forty days go by, we share with the chosen people the well-nigh impossible task committed to their trust.

It was forty years after Sinai's confrontation before Israel entered the Land of Promise. Added generations passed from the scene as failure contradicted victory and sin eventuated into repentance — time after time. The Theocracy gave way to the Kingdom; and Saul, David, and Solomon reigned over the people of God's choosing. Then — tragedy — and the Kingdom was divided — Judah and Israel going their separate ways. In this sorry state of affairs there came a time in the life of Israel when God sent His prophet, Elijah, Ahab

ATLANTA (BP) — The Southern Baptist Home Mission Board's rural-urban program has added a new associate here and launched two new summer-long resort mission projects.

crusade began. "It is God's work and He deserves and receives all the glory," Mr. Graham felt the response of the initial services indicates a deep spiritual hunger of thousands of people in London and that what has happened here in the first days of the crusade is only the beginning of a great spiritual tide.

Invited more than three years ago by a committee of British clergy and laymen to hold his third major crusade in London, Billy Graham, along with his wife Ruth, received an overwhelming welcome upon their arrival on British soil. Representatives from the entire National Press Corps of England were first to meet Mr. Graham when a press interview was held aboard the Queen Mary. Afterwards the Grahams left by train from Southampton for a busy schedule of pre-crusade events beginning in London.

Mr. Graham, or "crusader Billy" as he has been dubbed by some of the press, greeted more than two thousand well-wishers at Waterloo Station when he and his wife arrived here. The arrival welcome would equal that reserved for royalty or the hottest pop group. With a battery of new photographers and movie cameramen blocking the way, and hundreds of police holding back the crowd, a mighty chorus of "To God Be the Glory" rang out. Mr. Graham, with his wife seated beside him rode in an open car waving at the singing crowd.

Anniversary
All this took place on the two hundred and thirty-eighth anniversary of John Wesley's "heartwarming experience" in London that led to a national revival, improved social conditions and the founding of the Methodist Church. As Mr. Graham shook hands with well-wishers and said, "God bless you," one man mentioned that he had been converted during the 1954 Haringay crusade. A woman threw a bouquet into Mrs. Graham's lap with the same message attached. The crowd waved the car several times with some welcomers breaking through the police lines to shake hands with Mr. Graham.

Last week Billy Graham invaded Cambridge and Oxford, the intellectual centres of the British Isles. In the one day of preaching, he spoke to more than seven thousand people—the great majority of them students at the meccas of higher learning. More than three hundred students made decisions at St. Aldate's Church in Oxford and great St. Mary's Church in Cambridge.

Even though the controlling spirit toward Mr. Graham has been friendly and warm there was some hostility presented to the evangelist. Shouts of "Yankee beggar go home" and "What about Vietnam?" met Mr. Graham as he entered the places of worship. A mock Beatles' recording blasted out "welcome" by some students at Cambridge. But this did not keep thousands of students from standing in lines for two hours to get into the churches before Mr. Graham's sermon. But the sound of the Beatles was drowned out by church bells and the cheers of students when Mr. Graham arrived.

Stetson Declines

Three Studies
The statement also said that the special Florida Baptist study on church-state relations is only one of three current Baptist studies on this subject. The statement said the other two were (1) the Baptist Education Study Task, a nation-wide Southern Baptist study on Christian higher education to continue through June of 1967; and (2) a continuing study by the Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs "which has been studying this topic for more than 10 years."

The Stetson trustees concluded their statement with an offer to meet with the members of the Florida Baptist Convention State Missions Board in joint session "so that together we can study these perplexing problems in advance of the November convention."

Convention Secretary Speaks
In Jacksonville, Fla., the executive secretary of the Florida Baptist Convention commented that the State Missions Board does not meet for another session until Sept. 8-9, and that he expected no response from the board until then.

"The die is cast," said John Maguire, executive secretary-treasurer of the Florida convention. "They've made their decision and nothing more can be done."

Maguire expressed his own personal convictions concerning the Stetson decision in his weekly column in the Florida Baptist Witness, official state Baptist newspaper.

"I believe that the cherished position of Baptists on the matter of separation of church and state has been, and is now, being threatened," said Maguire. "Furthermore, this principle is being put in grave danger by the acceptance of government grants on the part of Baptist institutions and agencies. This cherished and God-blessed position, if once lost, will be hard if not impossible to redeem."

"Therefore," he said, "I must state that I am unalterably opposed to any Baptist agency or institution accepting grants from the federal government. Let God's people bring God's money to finance God's work," he concluded.

Maguire also told the Baptist Press that 60 Baptist churches in the state had written to his office instructing him to withhold their mission gifts to Stetson.

Not Convention Owned
Although Stetson, a private Baptist institution with a self-perpetuating board of trustees, is not owned by the Florida Baptist Convention, it receives about $400,000 per year through the convention's Cooperative Program unified budget plan. The 60 churches instructed the convention not to send their money to Stetson through the normal budget channels.

The statement from the Stetson trustees said they were "grateful for the generous support that the convention has been able to provide for the operating funds of the university out of the limited Cooperative (Program) funds contributed."

"The inadequacy of these funds to also provide badly needed new buildings, however, made it necessary for the trustees to seek funds for construction from other sources," said the Stetson trustees.

If we were to be completely honest, we would have to admit to a secret, troublesome envy of that prodigal who takes Sunday for his own, who lives by his own code, who has cut all the attached strings. Oh, it is not there all of the time; it just crops out now and then making us feel crochety, imposed on, touchy. Sometimes our dose of religion is just enough to make us miserable, not enough to make us free and happy.—Ralph L. Murray in "Plumb Lines and Fruit Baskets," (Broadman Press, 1965).

tions for Red China; refused to allow the convention "to become too involved in the ecumenical movement"; and refused to shuttle aside a motion reaffirming Baptist dedication to church-state separation.

In a similar editorial, the Missouri Word and Way cited two other things in the convention refused to do as significant: refusal to consider a motion to deny seats to an Arkansas church because of its doctrinal practices, and refusal to instruct the convention's program committee to set aside two hours in the 1967 convention to discuss current moral and theological issues.

The California Southern Baptist, however, termed the business transacted as "highly significant."

"Although it appeared routine, the adoption of program statements for several SBC agencies brought to conclusion a monumental task that has been in the mill for several years," said the California paper. "The importance of this cannot be overestimated."

"The convention was likewise noteworthy for launching the greatest evangelistic campaign ever attempted, and for adopting a record $24.2 million missions budget," said the California editorial.

Executive Group Praised

Editorials in the California and Colorado Baptist state papers praised the SBC Executive Committee for a "wise decision" in asking for more time to study the possibility of changing the convention's name. Both papers favor a possible new name, when one is determined.

Another issue which never fully developed was the question of federal aid to Baptist institutions, pointed out several editorials. Editorials in Texas, Virginia, Mississippi, Missouri, Tennessee, and California Baptist papers lauded adoption of a resolution reaffirming Baptist devotion to separation of church and state and opposing use of tax money for sectarian causes.

Editorials in the Texas, Mississippi, and Colorado papers classified the convention as "anti-ecumenical."

The Baptist Standard said the resolution adopted "left no room for anyone to believe Southern Baptists have bugged an inch toward structural organization of all believers."

"Liberals should have been uncomfortable in this convention session," said the Baptist Record of Mississippi.

Editorials in seven state Baptist papers presented opposing views on the merits of a convention decision against devoting two hours in the 1967 meeting to a discussion of current moral and theological issues.

The North Carolina and Virginia papers strongly opposed the decision against a discussion of issues, while state papers in Indiana, Tennessee, Florida, Missouri, and California generally agreed with the decision.

Editorials in the Kentucky, Ohio, and Indiana papers urged a re-evaluation of holding the SBC Pastors' Conference prior to the main convention, saying that the messengers are emotionally drained from listening to sermon after sermon before the convention starts.

The Missouri Word and Way chided messengers for being "rough on speakers" during the convention. Time and again the speakers addressed vanishing congregations, the editorial said.

What affect will the editorial comments in the Baptist state papers have on future conventions? Ask 20 different editors and you'll probably get that many different opinions, if the widely divergent viewpoints expressed in SBC editorial evaluations is an indication.

Missionaries Safe

The Merrells spent the night on their porch, dozing and watching spotter planes, Sky-raid, and flares. They did not know what was happening.

To calm the children, Danny, six, and Timmy, four, they sang and prayed. ("That is what you're supposed to do isn't it?") Mrs. Merrell queried the Orient secretary of the Foreign Mission Board.) Mrs. Merrell suggested a chorus telling of God's care and protection, then asked Danny what to sing next. His choice: "Skip to My Lou." ("Very calming, wouldn't you say?" comments his mother.)

Though Lewis Myers got back on Tuesday (with a car), the Merrells, at their home on the edge of the city, were concerned for the Myers family. For two days Mr. Merrell tried to get to the Myers home each time there was a lull. When he succeeded, on Saturday, he found them living in the hall and one bedroom. The house was bullet-riddled and had a big hole in the roof, probably from a grenade. All of them went back to the Merrell home.

(Later the men found seven gaping holes in the Myers roof and bullets embedded in the doors and shutters.)

One of the "tensest moments" came on Sunday, May 22, continues Mrs. Merrell. Troops started pouring in from the bay and taking up positions on the beach near their home. But they withdrew and no fighting occurred there. The next day the opposition forces surrendered.

"Well, that's the firsthand report from our vantage point," writes Mrs. Merrell. "We are glad we didn't have to leave again. Home is such a nice place to be!"

"Toni Myers stated a big truth the other day. 'We've learned to be thankful for the usually common things of life: for a meal without gunfire, a peaceful night's sleep, for whole, uninjured bodies, for electricity (it had returned) and ice and refrigeration, for the opportunity to go to town when we want to."

"For friends—we never expect to meet anyone finer anywhere than Lewis, Toni, Mike, Laura, Margaret, and Gray Myers, for cool wind, usually unheard of in Da Nang at this time of year, for the United States, a country big enough to keep fighting for this country even while it's stumbling around trying to find its way, for prayer, for a joke, something to laugh at, for a washing machine and an iron to use. Where can we stop?"

"But more than all these, we are thankful for our faith in a living, revealed God."

the board approved the appointment of John B. McBride as a new associate in its department of rural-urban missions.

McBride currently is associational superintendent of missions in Rankin County, Miss., and former pastor of several churches in Louisiana and Mississippi.

Wilson Brumley, secretary of the department, said McBride will have across-the-board responsibilities, but that he will major on urban areas, communities of 2,500 to 50,000 population.

His assignment will involve projects to uncover the mission needs of Baptist churches, associations, and state conventions in such areas and to coordinate the work of other Home Mission Board programs within the framework of urban communities.

In the area of resort missions, the board approved appointment of two seminary students to probe the possibilities of permanent ministries at Jekyll Island, Ga., and Breckenridge, Colo., both national resort areas.

Brumley's new associate, McBride, is a graduate of Mississippi College (Baptist), Clinton, Miss., and New Orleans Baptist Seminary.

McBride also has been associational superintendent of missions in Jasper and Bolivar counties in Mississippi. His pastorates include the Vaiden Baptist Church, Vaiden, Miss.; Mandeville Baptist Church, Mandeville, La.; Evans Creek Baptist Church in Pearl River, La.; Self Creek Baptist Church in Starkville, Miss.; and the 1st Baptist Church of Byram, near Jackson, Miss.

Rev. John B. McBride

THE YOUNG people from First Church, Jackson, who participated in "Operation Involvement" are seen just before the plane took off from Jackson on Saturday morning of last week. Seen in doorway are the pastor, Dr. W. Douglas Hudgins, who was present to see them off and Mrs. R. C. Alexander, youth director who went with the group, along with her husband. Seen at right are Dr. and Mrs. Raymond Martin, who also accompanied the group.

First, Jackson's 'Operation Involvement' Leads To Denver

Saturday morning, June 11, 7 A.M., Hawkins Airport, Jackson, marked the departure of twenty-two senior high youth, three counselors, and Mrs. R. C. Alexander, youth director, for Denver, Colorado, where the group from First Church, Jackson, will assist in Vacation Bible Schools in four churches of the city.

This study group began preparation in October of 1965 and continued through May of 1966. The training program included a ten session intensive Bible course taught by Mrs. Carl Guernsey; a doctrinal course under the direction of Dr. Jennings Van Landingham; an evaluation of the Sunday morning and evening worship services by each participant from October 24, 1965 to May 29, 1966.

The latter carried the stipulation that the participants keep notebooks where notes and outlines of the sermons delivered by the pastor, Dr. W. Douglas Hudgins could be recorded. The participants also noted whether they had a worship experience and if not, why not. This called for self-inventory. It was the thinking concerning this stipulation that persons would be given more purpose in listening and that by continuous effort the worship experiences could be enhanced. In addition to the above stipulations, member of the group must have participated in January Bible Study Week, Youth Week, practiced stewardship in giving, as well as be cognizant of witnessing opportunities.

The youth will work in groups of fives and sixes in the following Denver churches: Alameda Hills, Brentwood, University Hills, and First, Westminster.

Definite assignments for the Bible schools were made to youth after Mrs. Alexander conferred with each of the above four churches and determined where the greatest needs were. The assigned First Baptist Jackson youth will be leading Bible discussion groups, telling character stories, taking charge of music in all age groups, directing group and activity time for Beginners and Primaries, as well as directing the creative period for Junior boys and girls.

Each group will be in charge of the Wednesday evening prayer services in the church to which it is assigned. The assigned Denver churches are furnishing food and lodging for the young people.

Arrangements for this project in Denver were made through the superintendent of missions for the Denver area, Rev. George Gaskin.

The group was transported by the Jack Adams Aircraft Sales, Inc. Service, Walls, Mississippi.

The group will return on Saturday, June 18, at 5 P.M.

Hudgins Speaks At SBC On 'A Surprise At Sinai'

was the King; Jezebel was the Queen; and in the life of Elijah we discover "A Surprise at Sinai."

Herbert Lockyer has said of Elijah, "He is the grandest and most romantic character Israel ever produced." Scripture is silent about him until he bursts upon the scene to rebuke the goddess, awaken the people, and restore to its proper place in the purpose of God the nation of which he was a part. Confronting wicked King Ahab, Elijah announces the judgment of Jehovah in a three-year drought, during which he lived in hiding at the brook Cherith, where he was fed by ravens while the land seared and burned. Water failing, he went north to Sidon, where, in the home of a widow, he performed the miracle of the handful of meal and the crust of oil, later raising the widow's son from the dead.

When the terrible drought neared its end, God dispatched Elijah to challenge Ahab to the contest at Carmel. There, in magnificent triumph Elijah witnessed the rout of the worshippers of Baal, and the death of four hundred and fifty of the pagan priests. The day of God's vengeance over, Elijah's servant brought word that a cloud, the size of a man's hand, was arising out of the sea. Recognizing this as a Divine omen, he predicted that rain would come and in a few hours the drought was ended.

But, as sometimes happens to earth's most magnificent men, Elijah's world collapsed about him. Ahab, utterly routed and publicly ridiculed, had shared his defeat with his queen, Jezebel. She, the epitome of evil, determined at once to have the prophet's life, and warned him of his doom. Utterly fatigued, spiritually exhausted, emotionally drained — and plunged from the victories at Carmel to the diabolical threats of a murderous monarch — Elijah is engulfed in self-pity and succumbs to despair about his personal well-being. The Scripture (I Kings 19:1-16) tells us that "he arose and went for his life and came to Beersheba, and left his servant there. But he himself went a day's journey into the wilderness, and came and sat down under a juniper tree, and requested for himself that he might die, and said, It is enough; now, O Jehovah, take away my life; for I am not better than my fathers. And he lay down and slept, and an angel touched him and said, Arise and eat . . . and the angel came again the second time and said, Arise and eat . . . and he went in the strength of that food forty days and nights unto HOREB THE MOUNT OF GOD."

THE PROPHET FACES A NEW SITUATION

"How the mighty are fallen!" Almost within hours the mighty proclaimer of the sovereignty of Jehovah and victor over the paganism of idolatrous worship becomes a hated, persecuted, flight-filled fugitive—fearful for his own life! Apparently because of no fault of his own, and with the self-satisfaction of a great personal dedication to the will, and way of his God, Elijah is cast into the Slough of Despond.

Past victories are of little comfort to him now. The impact of his powerful preaching now fades into dim memories. The awe-inspiring impact of his part in Jehovah's triumph on Mt. Carmel now appears insignificant. God seems to have forgotten; his followers have forsaken him; the people have turned against him; the rulers seek his life. From the epitome of Divine success he plummets into apparent failure and dismal rejection. An entirely new situation has arisen and he feels himself utterly unable to interpret it—much less cope with it.

Elijah's first consideration was for his own life. And, before we criticize him for cowardice, let us remember that if he had not been so concerned, Jezebel and her lackeys would have had his head to impale on the gates of the royal court. Frightened,—of course he was; confused,—certainly; despondent,—naturally; but one thing Elijah temporarily forgot. He forgot that his life was not his own. After a day's journey from Beersheba, utterly alone after he left his servant in the city, he was seized with self-pity and prayed, "O Jehovah, take away my life; for I am not better than my fathers."

Many of us as God's prophets, if we would be frankly honest with God and ourselves, and thousands of us as Christians have found ourselves in the prophet's company. We may not have prayed to die, but we have faced the same bewilderment that confronted Elijah. The six short years of this decade have thrust us all into a new and bewildering day. Our constant battle is against a pernicious pessimism and the feeling that we are losing instead of gaining in our witness for God in today's world. The godless march of atheistic communism throughout the world seems unabated; ethnic hatreds and national antagonisms appear to be increasing; moral ideals undoubtedly are toppling; domestic foundations are crumbling; disrespect for law and government grows menacing a new and different proclamation for the people. All this Elijah remembered. Moses had become a different man at Sinai; Elijah needed to be made over.

Elijah wanted three things: a new God; a new message; met God, had received a new commission, had witnessed the frightful manifestation of the Almighty's glory, and had reingly, personal freedoms are being sacrificed for physical security, and every community in our nation is being afflicted with what someone has called "a wild sexo-mania."

Many take comfort in the growth of church membership in our nation, but by any series of standards or statistics Christianity is not keeping up with the rate of population increase. In most of our churches less than half our membership attends a worship service on Sunday morning and the average attendance on Sunday night is a disgrace to our profession. Our "floating membership population"—those Baptists who are not active members of any congregation—must be a great inspiration to the Devil and a disappointment to God.

We have not taken comfort, in the last three years, in the statistical record we have achieved here in our own Convention. The rate of increase in membership has declined; Sunday School attendance has fallen off; the drop in our Training Union participation is tremendous and the decline in reported conversions by baptism reported through the churches is alarming. We do not worship statistics, but we cannot ignore them.

Indisputable, also, is the fading of the image of the pastor in the local community. A half century ago he was the stabilizing force in the town. He was respected, listened to, sought after. The moral standards he publicly proclaimed had a tonic effect on public ethics. He stood in his pulpit with a "Thus saith the Lord" on his lips, and the people listened.

Today, in many areas, the preacher is a "Voice crying in the wilderness," to whom few pay attention, and still fewer follow. Sometimes, instead of a "Thus saith the Lord," the congregation hears, "What saith the people?" In many segments of Christianity in America God's Word has been discarded and "ethical righteousness" has been substituted. Few of us have the courage to preach against sin, and perhaps fewer of us convince our people that "In Him is there salvation, and none other; for there is none other name under heaven, given among men, whereby ye must be saved." Many of us, pastors and members alike, have unconsciously become embroiled in MOVEMENTS while we temporarily forget MOTIVES.

Past victories of our God seem to be forgotten. The average congregation gives more consideration to its comfort than to its concern; to its enjoyment rather than its endowment; to its giving rather than its praying; to its ecumenical acceptance in the world brotherhood of men rather than its individual spiritual witness in the power of the Holy Spirit. Spiritual victories of the years past seem to many but delectable memories; revival fires are hard to fan into flames and seldom is there witnessed a consuming conflagration of spiritual might.

Perhaps, as never before in our history, there is a widespread inner despondency in the hearts of our pastors. Many face tensions in their congregations and opposition in their communities. Hundreds are restless and plagued by uncertainty. The pressures of "administrativism," "psycho-counselism," and "community bettermentism" take their toll of time and energy and the average prophet of God has little time for study, for meditation, for prayer, for preparation—and, in many of our services, for preaching. Promotion and programming — vitally necessary, and a worthy part of our modern ministry — often overshadow the proclamation of God's Word, and the preacher finds himself imprisoned like a puppet rather than freed like a prophet.

No wonder, then, that many of God's modern prophets feel exactly like Elijah. He never did doubt God's call to be a prophet, but he did find himself utterly bewildered and confused when his witness was focused on a new day and a new time. Little is said in the Scripture about the followers of God — those loyal to Elijah — except "I leave me seven thousand in Israel . . . which have not bowed unto Baal." These, it well can be assumed, faced the same dilemma experienced by the prophet. His confusion and bewilderment must have been reflected in their attitude. All in all, prophet and people, they faced a new day in confusion and dismay.

THE PROPHET SEEKS A NEW SOLUTION

Elijah's flight from Jezebel ended, according to the Scripture, at HOREB THE MOUNT OF GOD.

What was HOREB and where was it? HOREB is simply another name for Sinai. Some scholars say one particular mountain; others, a local range; but HOREB was none other than SINAI!

Why did Elijah flee to Sinai? What was there that would interest him? It seems to me the answer is obvious. Something was there that he wanted desperately; something that would satisfy the torturing agony of his soul.

It was at Sinai, generations before, that the patriarch Moses had received a transforming experience. There he had and a new program. To him it was apparent that his old God had disappeared, his old message no longer had an effect, and his former program was out of date!

The prophet thought he needed a new God. Jehovah, Whom he had served so faithfully, and Who had vindicated him so majestically at Carmel a little while before, evidently had vanished from sight. If He still reigned in such glory, why was He allowing His prophet to suffer?

Naturally, Elijah thought of his hero, Moses. Here at Sinai Moses had caught hold of a "new" God; a God displayed in earthquakes, dazzling brightness, shrieking winds and consuming fire! Moses at the Mount had seen Jehovah in a new role; that of the Giver of the Law! Now, perhaps, he himself was in need of a new God for his Day!

Then, Elijah felt he needed a new message. The burden of his prophecy had been triumphant in the days past, and God had given His blessing to every proclamation. "The majesty and supremacy of Jehovah!"—that had been his theme; but it was a message outdated and no longer effective. The blatant evil of the current moment could not be quelled by his preaching of former days. Surely, he mused, there must be a new message for a new day.

Where could it be procured? Why, at Sinai, of course. Here Moses spoke with God face to face and received from Him a new and different message. It was no longer a proclamation of deliverance, but a call to conquest. Thus, the prophet must have so reasoned, there is a new message for me in this changed day.

But that was not all. Elijah must have had an overwhelming conviction that he needed a new program. A new directive; a new motive; a new plan. The simplicity of God's utilization of him as a nation's voice of conscience through simple, sin-smiting preaching now was over. God evidently had something else for him to do.

So, here at Sinai, Elijah hoped that he might receive new marching orders that would thrust him victorious into a different activity as God's distinctive servant. The old order was over; a new day was upon him. Naturally, he thought, there must be something new for this new moment!

How like so many of God's people today! How like Elijah are so many of us as the prophets of God! Here we face a new day and a new age, one that brings confusion and condemnation upon us, and we sometimes feel like Elijah of old. WE often want a new God, a new message and a new program!

SINAI PRODUCES A SURPRISE

What does Elijah do when he reaches Sinai? The Scripture says, "And he came thither unto a cave and lodged there." Finally, having discovered shelter and safety, the discouraged prophet waits for his individual revelation. Soon, Jehovah appears and says, "What doest thou here, Elijah?" In reply God's servant voices his confusion and complaint and seeks to whine his way out of a situation beyond his interpretation. "The children of Israel have forsaken Thy covenant," he says, "thrown down Thy altars, and slain Thy prophets with the sword; and I, even I only, am left; and they seek my life to take it away."

Then Jehovah replies: "Go forth, and stand upon the mountain!"

"This is it," Elijah thought; "NOW I shall have MY dramatic moment with God." Memories of Moses swirled through his mind and the possibilities of a repeat performance of Divine disclosure lifted his spirits. Here he was to receive his new God, his new message, and his new program!

What magnificent and violent displays he witnessed! Like Moses before him, Elijah watched the might of Jehovah revealed. From the snug shelter of his cave in the rocks, he now was standing on the peak of the mountain. God was coming to his rescue! The gentle breeze that kissed his brow turned into a gale. The shrieking of the winds mounted into a tornadoic roar. Trees were splintered or torn from their deep-rooted sockets, great boulders were dislodged and hurtled down into the valley, and the hills themselves seemed to burst open in frenzy. But the Scripture says, "but Jehovah was not in the wind."

Soon, the fury of the storm passed. Then, a faint guiver of the earth at his feet was felt, and a dull rumble reached the prophet's ears. All about him the hills shook as the whole area quaked in convulsions of rebellion against some mysterious power. "How God was displaying His might!" Elijah rejoiced. "And even Moses never saw anything like this. But the Scripture says, 'Jehovah was not in the earthquake.'"

His mind dancing with delight and his pulse racing with excitement, Elijah was hardly prepared for what followed. Fire! Oh, he had seen the fire of God fall on the water-soaked sacrifices on Mt. Carmel weeks before and had been unafraid, but never anything like this! The whole mountain seemed ablaze! Flaming steeds of destruction raced up and down the valley! Smoke billowed upward as from the furnaces of Sheol! But, as the fires roared, he was not singed; he was not endangered. "How fantastic!" Elijah mused. "I have seen that which even Moses did not see. Jehovah is answering my prayer. I am discovering something new." But, again, the Scripture says, "Jehovah was not in the fire."

As the three phenomena of nature ran their courses, Elijah stood in the entrance of his cave and waited. He waited, —and waited,—and kept on waiting. Surely Jehovah would speak through all this; speak in thundering majesty that would silence every enemy and guarantee victory to his disconsolate prophet. His waiting was in vain, for, the Scripture says, "After the fire, a still, small voice." Just a still, small voice—that's all.

What did that still small voice say? What was the outcome of that "sound of gentle stillness?" The Scripture says, "And Jehovah said unto him, Go on thy way, . . . and anoint Hazael to be King over Syria. . . . Jehu to be King over Israel. . . . and Elisha to be prophet in thy room."

How post-climactic this was! What a disappointment had occurred! Elijah must have been a crestfallen creature when his anticipations failed to materialize. He had come all these torturing miles to Sinai so he could be another Moses, but Jehovah had not changed him one whit. He had witnessed far more than Moses ever saw but there was nothing new revealed. He had come seeking a new status, but he was sent back to his old task with nothing changed.

SINAI HAD BEEN A COMPLETE SURPRISE! Nothing new or different had transpired! No new God; no new message; no new program. No call to a new task with a different message and no new program to promulgate. Instead, in the still, small voice through which God usually guides His servants, Elijah received no new commission, but was sent back to his original task—to be a simple voice for Jehovah! It was as if God had said, "My servant, I am the same God you have always had; I have no new message for my people; and I have no new program for the days ahead. Continue with your task; I have but one purpose, and that is to bring to men a realization of the fatal fallacy of sin and the adequate power of God to transform lives of men."

Do we need that assurance today? In our confusion and dismay, do we need to be reassured of the same thing? God is not dead; in fact, as someone has observed, we have not heard that He was even sick. He still lives as the God of our day. His message for men is unchanged; for "In Him is there salvation, and in none other." His program is unchanged; the Great Commission still is the Christian's marching order.

The application I leave to your own heart. Are we to experience a Surprise at Sinai?

An analysis that the Revenue Service has just completed of 1963 individual tax returns has revealed that 371 taxpayers reported taxable income of more than $1 million for that year, compared with 355 the year before.

Tourist Office Offers Film On Israel, Free

A brilliantly colored, English narrated film depicting the visit of a Southern Baptist group to Israel, the Land of the Bible, is being made available to churches, schools, Baptist Youth Clubs and other affiliated organizations, by the Israel Government Tourist Office in Atlanta, Georgia.

The film, a 16 mm. issue, has English narration throughout and follows the group first to the many sites in Jerusalem, including a visit to the Baptist Church there. Thence, they travel to Nazareth to view the many Holy Sites of that city and visit the Baptist School and its Director, Rev. J. W. Smith.

From here the film follows the group to Tiberias, the Sea of Galilee, Capernaum and the Mount of Beatitudes, to Mount Carmel and Caesarea and on to the Baptist Village for a detailed visit of this important school and farm.

The film lasts 14 minutes, and has been termed as very good by the Southern Baptist Television Commission. There is no rental or other charge for the use of the film. Interested parties wishing to screen it should write to the Israel Government Tourist Office, 906 Peachtree Street, N. E., Atlanta, Ga. 30309.

Two Conventions

Two major Baptist Conventions, American and Southern have met in the past month. American Baptists met in Kansas City in mid-May, while the Southern Baptist Convention met in Detroit one week later.

Major concern and emphasis for Southern Baptists in Detroit was evangelism and missions, the giving of the Word of God to the "New Age."

According to the Capital Baptist "The overriding concern at this (American) convention was Church Union and/or Church Unity. Delegates talked about it in the convention, in the corridor, in hotel rooms—everywhere."

Southern Baptists continued to emphasize the great central truths of Biblical revelation, which have been their message through their history.

American Baptists were "strongly urged" by one of their leaders to "re-evaluate their basic beliefs." The speaker was Dr. Edward Tuller, General Secretary for the Convention.

Ecumenicalism

The American Baptist Convention president pled for the convention to have "an effective voice before the Consultation on Church Union." (This is the so-called Blake-Pike proposal for the uniting of several protestant denominations.) The American Baptist Convention is not an official participant in the "consultation" although it does have official observers for the group's meetings.

Many American Baptists, including some leaders, apparently want the convention to become a participant in the unity discussions. This was not voted by the convention, although the observer status was continued.

The American convention set up a "Commission on Christian Unity" to work in the field of ecumenism, but adopted an amendment to the proposal which requires that the commission adhere rigidly to "Baptist distinctives." This amendment was approved by a narrow margin of 1,018 to 920. Opponents said that such a requirement would "restrict our flexibility of negotiation" and many of those who strongly favor the unity movements were reported to be disturbed by the amendment.

Two Giant Denominations

One speaker at Kansas City, Dr. John E. Skoglund, of Colgate-Rochester Divinity School, said that two giant denominations were developing in the United States, and that "In coming years the American Baptist Convention will have to choose between 'two colossi' or resign itself to becoming a dwindling denomination with a negligible influence."

"The two giant Protestant Churches he envisioned are the 10.6 million-member Southern Baptist Convention and the 24 million-member-plus Church contemplated by the Consultation on Church Union."

Dr. Skoglund pointed out "that even if a single Baptist, or immersionist Church could be developed in America, it might have dubious values for the ABC."

He added "If united with Southern Baptists, would American Baptists have to give up their present involvement in the ecumenical movement; could such a denominational body be racially integrated—and what about the effect of the SBC on theological freedom?"

Dr. Skoglund appeared to feel that American Baptists should go with the ecumenical group, rather than with Southern Baptists in a Baptist movement. He urged "the ABC to look once again at the Consultation on Church Union as a 'significant movement of American Christianity'."

Editor James Duncan in Capital Baptist says "Some have observed that in the American Convention the leadership seems to be pulling strongly for church union, and the local churches, for the most part, are objecting. There seems to be little question but that the leadership is far ahead of the people in this matter."

Different Emphasis

While the emphasis on ecumenicalism was given in Kansas City, the concern in Detroit was the very opposite. The need for fellowship with, and for "a spirit of respect and good will" for all Christians, was recognized in messages and in a resolution. Nevertheless, in the resolution it was stated that "the majority of our people are not ecumenically minded in a structural and organizational sense," and this expressed the general attitude felt in the meeting.

The new president of the convention, Dr. H. Franklin Paschall, stated "We can do more in terms of evangelism, in reaching people, and in serving society, as we recover the mission of the local churches, than we can in uniting all bodies at the top."

Since the convention, Paschall has stated that one of the emphases he will give during his term as president will be "to seek recovery of the meaning and ministry of the local church." He "noted that there are values and blessings to be recognized in the ecumenical movement" but he added that he "was opposed to the organizational union of Baptists with other denominations."

Widening Cleavage

These and other reports reveal that the cleavage between Southern Baptists and American Baptists is widening, rather than diminishing. At least this seems to be true between the leadership of the American convention and Southern Baptists. There is much evidence that many American Baptist churches hold a position much nearer to Southern Baptists, than is expressed by the denominational leaders.

For example, many American Baptist churches are strongly and actively evangelistic, while the director of evangelism for the denomination, apparently does not believe in evangelism as Southern Baptists define and promote it.

It is becoming increasingly clear that the talk of union between American and Southern Baptists, being pushed by a small group, is merely wishful thinking. It is almost inconceivable that either convention would be willing to make the compromises which will be necessary if the two are to seek union.

Forget Union

It appears to us that it will be far better for the two conventions to continue on their separate ways, walking together in Christian fellowship, in so far as they can, but forgetting about ideas of union. Even though there are many areas of fellowship, and high respect and love continues between the two denominations, there is clear disagreement on programs and methods, so why should one group seek to force its program on the other? Let us forget union, and continue to walk together as brethren.

Main Stream?

One question still creating debate concerns which group is leaving the main stream of Christianity, the ecumenical minded denominations, or Southern Baptists and the other evangelicals who refuse to join them.

Critics of the Southern Baptist position claim that group is no longer in the main stream.

Most Southern Baptists would answer, "Not so! Southern Baptists are right in the heart of New Testament Christianity, where they always have been. It is the groups who are rejecting the authority of the New Testament, who are preaching a new gospel, and who are promoting a new program, other than the New Testament program of evangelism, missions, Christian education, and benevolence, who have left the main stream."

Whichever, may be right, it is very evident that for the present, at least, and most likely for the foreseeable future, Southern Baptists are going to continue on the course of what they believe is the middle of the stream of New Testament Christianity. And that course, to them, is not the ecumenical stream!

An editorial in The Christian Century has challenged the validity of crime rate statistics: "When, for example, the report shows that there was an 8% increase in serious crimes in the nation's suburbs in 1965, we need to ask such questions as the following: What is the ratio of this increase to the increase in suburban population? How does this 8% figure relate to the rise of crime-producing suburban slums. What is the rate of physical and sociological decay in suburban areas and what is the correlation between this development and increasing crime in the suburbs? In our mobile society is it possible to credit a crime to the inner city, the city, or the suburbs only on the basis of the site of its occurrence? And is this not a meaningless and in many cases an unjust imputation of blame? We can point to the place where a crime occurred, but can we pinpoint the situation which produced it?"

A program of birth control services for poor families in Baltimore reduced the number of babies born in that city in 1965 to the lowest level in twenty years. The 19,800 new babies were 2,000 less than the total for 1964, a 10% drop. The program revealed that poor families, like middle and upper economic groups, want to control the size of their families. According to the Information Center on Population Problems, the 2,000 drop in births will save the city, state, and federal governments a minimum of $14 million—including investment and operating expenses for education, health, sanitation, fire and police facilities, and the cost of aid to dependent children and maternal care.

U. S. and Soviet stockpiles now contain a destructive force equal to more than ten tons of TNT for every human being on the globe. Several non-nuclear nations possess the technical ability to produce nuclear weapons. "The time to halt nuclear spread," President Johnson has said, "is before the contagion takes root."

Liquor spending by Americans is pegged at $13 billion this year, up $1 billion from 1965.

PERSPECTIVE

Robert J. Hastings

"The Sound of Music"

As a Junior boy in Sunday school, I remember how we were taught to find Scripture passages. "Let the Bible fall open to the middle, and you will always find Psalms. Then turn forward or backward to locate the other books."

And just as the Psalms are in the middle of the Bible, so they occupy a central place in our religious aspirations. The Psalms are like a great verbal reservoir, reflecting the hopes, fears, aspirations, doubts, love, and faith of all mankind. The word Psalm is from the Greek psalmos, meaning "a poem sung to the accompaniment of stringed instruments."

The sound of music echoes throughout the Bible, as well as in the Psalms. Moses and the Israelites burst into song after the miraculous crossing of the Red Sea. A choir of 4,000 sang when David moved the ark of the covenant into the newly completed tabernacle. Heavenly choirs sang the good news of Christ's birth. Paul and Silas, beaten and jailed, sang praises at midnight. Exiled on Patmos, John heard beautiful music "as the voice of many waters" together with "the voice of harpers harping upon their harps."

Just as the Psalms are found in the heart of the Bible, so joy and singing is at the heart of the Christian faith. David McCommon says the dirge and chant are used in pagan religions. Only Judaism and Christianity have developed music as an integral part of worship, and Christianity far surpasses Judaism in psalms of praise.

George Frederick Handel considered "The Messiah" as his personal testimony. "During the composition of the Hallelujah Chorus, I did think I did see all Heaven before me, and the great God Himself!"

Open your Bible at the center, and you find the Psalms. Open your life to the world and, if you are a Christian, those around you will hear a song. Maybe not an oratorio. But the sound will be unmistakably that of music.

A copy of the first Bible printed in America, with both Old and New Testaments rendered into the Algonquin tongue by John Eliot for the Indians of Massachusetts, recently was sold at auction for $62,000. The Bible was sold at Parke-Bernet Galleries, New York City.

SATAN, AN ANGEL OF LIGHT

"And no marvel; for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light" (II Cor. 11:14).

Arndt and Gingrich (Greek-English Lexicon) render this "Satan disguises himself as an angel (fr. the kgdm.) of light." He changes his outward form so as to appear as a messenger from the kingdom of light or righteousness rather than from the kingdom of darkness or evil.

In the Bible when Satan appears before God he always appears as Satan (cf. Job 1:6ff.; Matt. 4:3ff.). He cannot fool God, for God knows him for who and what he is. But when he appears directly to man, he never appears as Satan (cf. Gen. 3:1ff.). He always assumes some other role. For man does not understand his guiles. In the case of Eve he took the form of a serpent. This was not a crawling snake. This resulted from the curse put upon the serpent (Gen. 3:14). Evidently he appeared to her as something of grace and beauty, perhaps a flying serpent, something with an appearance that would appeal to a woman.

He appears to tempt man as an angel of light. For instance, with regard to alcohol he appears not as a drunkard but as a "man of distinction." With regard to sex he assumes the role not of a shameless prostitute but of a beautiful, popular social butterfly. He lures with the best, but pays off with the worst.

In the immediate context Paul is discussing his enemies, the Judaizers, who assumed the role of ministers of light when actually they were ministers of unrighteousness (II Cor. 11:13,15). They were but following the pattern of their evil master. Robertson (Word Pictures, in loco) comments, "Masquerading as apostles of Christ by putting on the outward habiliments, posing as ministers of Christ ('gentlemen of the cloth,' nothing but cloth)."

The devil has many tools. But his favorite ones are preachers, deacons, Sunday School teachers, or other leaders in the church who allow themselves to be used of Satan. This use may be through holy profession but evil practice posing as teachers of truth but teaching error, or professing to follow the Prince of Peace, all the while being apostles of discord and strife.

Again quoting Robertson, "It is a tragedy to see men (and women) in the livery of heaven serve the devil" (Ibid., in loco, v.15). Amen!

AFRICAN DIARY by Wayne Dehoney (Broadman, 157 pp., $3.95, illustrated with photographs).

Dr. Dehoney, pastor of First Church, Jackson, Tenn., and retiring president of the SBC, shares the experiences of his 1965 visit to Africa. The informal travelogue takes the reader from Cairo to Johannesburg to Monrovia with some 37 stops along the way. Dr. Dehoney's main concern was Southern Baptist mission fields. In the final chapter, he discusses questions that many readers would ask, such as, What is the future of the white man in Africa? What about the continued violence, abridgement of personal liberties, and political upheavals in African governments? Are the Communists active in Africa? What is the Baptist opportunity in Africa? Along with answering some questions for the readers, Dr. Dehoney asks a question himself: "If they in Africa can do so much with so little, why are we doing so little with so much?"

BILLY GRAHAM, THE AUTHORIZED BIOGRAPHY by John Pollock (McGraw-Hill, 277 p.p., $4.95)

No man in the world today is more widely known than Billy Graham, but those who read this biography will know him even better. Already many know of his preaching power, his dedication, his effective witness, but this book will take them behind the scenes to know his prayer life, his passion to be completely and fully in God's hands, his desire for spiritual knowledge and spiritual power. The author presents the family background, the early influences, the conversion experience, and the training and preparation of a young man who unknowingly had a date with destiny—God's destiny. One experiences the very days when Graham suddenly was lifted out of a ministry unknown to the world, to a ministry that now reaches literally around the world. The humility, the ability to delegate responsibility, the complete surrender to the Holy Spirit, the personal life of this unusual man, all are clearly shown. This book will stir and influence the reader. It should be read by multitudes, young and old alike.

THOSE WHO CAME FORWARD by Curtis Mitchell (Chilton, 222 pp., $3.95)
What about Billy Graham's type of evangelism, the calling of men and women and young people to a personal commitment to and faith in Christ? Is this true New Testament evangelism, and is it what the world needs today? Does it really have lasting results? Have these persons really been born again? Liberals say not, but evangelicals say yes? This author decided to find out if lives of those coming forward in Graham revivals, really have been changed. Has there been a real experience with God? And did it last?

The first part of the book presents the Billy Graham invitation and appeal, and discusses why people respond to it. This is followed by a section tracing the lives of many individuals who responded to that appeal, and tells what happened to them afterward. The last part of the book presents letters from many persons, telling of what the experience has done for their lives. The book is a thrilling "record of the power of Christ in human hearts, and certainly is a testimony to the fact that the gospel Billy Graham preaches, truly is "the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth."

WHAT THE CULTS BELIEVE by Irvine Robertson (Moody Press, 128 pp., $2.95)
A guide to the teachings of the major modern cults, such as Mormonism, Christian Science, Jehovah's Witnesses, Seventh-Day Adventism, Swedenborgianism, etc. The author did not write the book to provoke argument, but "to inspire evangelical believers to a positive yet loving offensive in meeting false teaching."

ALL THE BOOKS AND CHAPTERS OF THE BIBLE by Herbert Lockyer (Zondervan, 313 pp., $4.95).

A capsule commentary on every chapter in the Bible in addition to being a helpful Bible study book; Dr. Lockyer's devotional comments are adaptable for private or family devotions. This book also includes a brief outline of the books of the Bible.

WHAT JESUS HAD TO SAY ABOUT MONEY by Frank C. Laubach (Zondervan, 63 pp., paperback, $1.00).

Dr. Laubach firmly believes that Jesus taught that the Christian may accumulate riches in "heavenly places" by putting his possessions to work for God each day. Using such examples as the rich young ruler, Zacchaeus, and the Good Samaritan, he conclusively proves his point.

1600 QUIPS AND QUIPS by E. C. McKenzie (Baker, 72 pp., paperback, $1.00).
For church bulletins and bulletin boards, and "to spice your speaking and writing," here are 1600 quotations.

20-20 Windshield—

The hitchhiker noticed a pair of thick lensed spectacles on the seat beside the driver. He leaned over, and said anxiously, "I'm sorry sir, but you forgot to put on your glasses." "Forget it, son," the Texan replied. "The windshield's ground to my prescription."

Phrenology Test

Phrenology? It's merely bunk! I guess I ought to know, 'cause, just for fun, I tried it out a little while ago. A fellow came to town who claimed to read heads in a minute. I let him read my head; that's how I found there's nothing in it.

"Adopt A Granddad" At Old Men's Home

Some of the happiest hours at the Old Men's Home, Madison, are those in the chapel around the piano. Many church groups enjoy being with the men on Wednesdays and Sundays for the regular services.

This philanthropic institution, supported largely by donations from individuals, church and civic groups, has been in the present location since the end of World War II. For over twenty years some 75 to 100 men over 65 years of age have called this home. Most of the residents have only their Old Age Assistance each month to apply on their room and board. A few also receive Social Security payments.

The cost of complete care, including the 25 to 30 men who are bedridden, is $5.00 per day per man. The men are able to pay about $2.25 of this and the Board of Directors asks the citizens of Mississippi to contribute the other $2.75 for each man each day.

On Father's Day the Old Men's Home makes its public appeal for room and board donations. To date the response has been generous and all bills have been met on time. During the Thanksgiving - Christmas season, many persons and groups responded to help make improvements to meet the sanitation and fire detection requirements of the State Board of Health.

At this time individuals and groups are encouraged to "Adopt a Granddad" for a day, a week, a month or a year. This can be done by sending an amount equal to

$2.75 per day to the Old Men's Home of Mississippi, Rt. 1, Box 284, Madison, Mississippi 39110.

THE BAPTIST RECORD 5

A Matter Of Fatherhood

MASTERCONTROL Vignette
By Dr. Charles Myers, Pastor
First Baptist Church
McAlester, Oklahoma

There is probably no statement a man can hear that makes him feel quite so tall as the greeting that comes from his child, Hi Dad. The words are few and the statement brief but it carries tremendous meaning. It expresses a close relationship. It carries a sense of pride. It recognizes a dependency. And it reveals a depth of love. Fortunate indeed is the man who gets to hear such a greeting and fortunate is the child who has a father worth greeting thus.

And those of us who make an effort to be worthy of such feeling resent the cartoons and television programs that present the father as a first class moron. We are quick to confess we are not overly endowed with intelligence but as the same time we realize that if we were as stupid as we are often presented no one would respect us, much less delight in greeting us.

But like many other things we resent, this characterization of the stupid father may be indicative of a sickness in our society. In reality our way of life is centered in a home with the father as the head. This does not mean he is some potentate who rules with an iron hand over his family and treats them all as slaves. Rather it means if he is the right kind of father, he rules in love and leads the family by precept and example in the right direction. Not only does he give guidance but when it is needed he disciplines his children in love. In fact if he does not discipline them he does not love them. If he is a good father he does more than just provide food and clothing and other physical necessities. He realizes the animal has all of these and he considers his child to be far superior to an animal. He is conscious that his child is a spiritual being created in the image of God. He is concerned about the soul and seeks to provide a spiritual atmosphere where that soul can become rightly related to God. A good father is so impressed with this importance that he would come nearer neglecting to provide for physical needs than he would the spiritual. Perhaps the failure of some men to be good fathers has brought about the moron characterization.

Here it is Father's Day. The phrase, Hi Dad, has a special significance today. The family will make on over me a little bit more than usual. They may even say some good things about me that are not true. What kind of Dad am I anyway? Looking inside where no one else can see, am I really the kind of Dad my child can be proud of? Have I given the moral and spiritual leadership that he or she deserves? Or have I just been content to provide physical needs as if he were an animal? Have I administered discipline in love or have I cheated him by refusing to offer corrections when He has made mistakes?

Being a father is a heavy responsibility. It is nice to be remembered with a special day. But the real need is not to be remembered. The real need is for every father in our land to realize his responsibilities as a father and ask God daily for the wisdom faithfully to discharge those responsibilities.

Translators And Printers Create Curious Bibles

Translators' whims and printers' errors have created a host of Biblical curiosities such as the "Breeches Bible," "Bug Bible," and the "Wicked Bible."

The Breeches Bible is the most famous of these unusual editions, the National Geographic Society says. In this 1560 English-language Bible, printed in Switzerland, the translator had Adam and Eve sewing fig leaves together to make "breeches," not the familiar "aprons" of the King James Version.

In a 1551 Bible, Psalm 91 speaks of "buggies by night," instead of "the terror by night." Buggies, or bogies, is an old English word meaning terror.

The "Treacle Bible"

Another 18th-century translator rendered Jeremiah's question, "Is there no balm in Gilead?" as "Is there not treacle at Gilead?" Thenceforth this version came to be known as the "Treacle Bible."

The apostle Peter advised husbands to treat a wife as "the weaker vessel," but the translator of a 1540 English Bible appended this stern note, "And if she be not obedient and helpful unto him, endeavoreth to beat the fear of God into her head." So was born the "Wife-Beater Bible."

Typographical errors have plagued Biblical scholars even more than eccentric translation. Mistakes were so prevalent in early English Bibles that the Crown took control of Bible printing, and even today a limited number of British publishers are authorized to print the King James Version.

Andrew Anderson, remembered as one of the worst printers ever known in Scotland, issued a Bible in the 17th century with 2,000 misprints in the New Testament alone.

Anderson was rivaled by John Field of London, who in 1653 printed a New Testament sprinkled with typographical errors. The most serious made a line from I Corinthians read, "... the unrighteous shall inherit the kingdom of God." Field's edition survives as the "Unrighteous Bible."

The "Wicked Bible of 1631 resulted from the omission of "not" from the Seventh Commandment. Charles I ordered the printers fined and all thousand copies that had been printed to be destroyed. Only four copies are known to have escaped and survived.

The reign of Charles I, also saw the "Fool Bible," in which the text of Psalm 14 read, "The fool hath said in his heart there is a God." The dropped "no" cost the printers 3,000 pounds.

"Basketful of Errors"

In 1717, John Baskett of Oxford printed an edition of the King James Bible with large type and many plates. But it proved to be so full of mistakes that the edition quickly acquired the nickname "A Basketful of Errors." It is also known as the "Vinegar Bible" from a heading on St. Luke 20, which read, "The Parable of the Vinegar" (for vineyard).

Three editions share the dubious distinction of being called the "Murderers Bible." One typographical error changed "murderers" in Jude to "murderers." Another made Numbers 35:18 read, "The murderer shall surely be put together," instead of "to death." In the third, the phrase from Mark 7:27, "Let the children first be filled," became shockingly, "Let them be killed."

Ruling Analyzed

have received loans. Some are in controversy over construction grants.

The court set up six criteria for sorting out the four colleges:

(1) The stated purposes of the college; (2) college personnel, including the governing board, administration, faculty, and student body; (3) the college's relationship with religious organizations and groups; (4) the place of religion in the college's program, including physical surroundings and religious observances sponsored by the college; (5) "outcome" of the college program; and (6) work and image of the college in the community.

The court made specific application of these criteria to each of the schools:

Carlson said a precaution should be observed regarding the scope of the Maryland ruling in that the grants involved were construction grants to the institutions themselves. Such aids as student and faculty aid, research projects and special purpose or category grants were not considered.

"The whole idea of public purchase of services from private institutions is not touched by the rationale of the case," Carlson observed.

The court reaffirmed past approvals of state grants to private institutions when "money is appropriated and expended for a public use." "Hence the Maryland court sustains its own use of the 'child benefit theory' as applied for welfare purposes," he said.

The Baptist leader raised questions about the future revision of college policies in relation to being "sectarian" or "secular." The basic question, he said, is how the colleges actually relate to the purposes and mission of the church.

"What roles will the churches need to plan for themselves in the field of higher education, and what kinds of schools are needed for those roles?"

Tolbert Lays Cornerstone For Kenyan Baptist School

By Eric H. Clark
Missionary to East Africa
NYERI, Kenya — "If you have the faith, God has the power," Dr. William R. Tolbert, Jr., president of the Baptist World Alliance and vice-president of Liberia, declared at dedication ceremonies for a new Baptist high school in Nyeri, Kenya, on April 16.

Dr. Tolbert had arrived in Kenya two days earlier for the annual East African Baptist Assembly, at Limuru. With the Liberian Ambassador to Kenya and Rev. Tom W. McMillan, chairman of the Baptist Mission of East Africa (organization of missionaries), he drove to the steep green hills of Nyeri, home of Kenya's picturesque Kikuyu tribe.

It was a tour of rain, sunshine, and smiles. As Dr. Tolbert, smiling broadly, crossed over the vivid green strip of grass which flanks the half-finished school buildings, there was a burst of spontaneous cheering.

The new Baptist high school is a project born of the deep hunger for education that burns in every Kikuyu heart. Out of this hunger came the pledge that members of Nyeri Baptist Association would provide one-fourth of the cost of the school if the Mission would provide the rest. Now, through the devotion of Baptists in the United States and in Kenya, this dream is being realized.

The campus is beautiful. Tall trees cast long shadows over fresh green lawns. Sunlight sparkles through the blue, mauve, and golden petals of creepers. Against this background the simple school buildings are beginning to rise.

On dedication day people were everywhere. There were Baptists, Christians of other denominations, and other interested people. Kenyan policemen were on hand to escort Dr. Tolbert and, if necessary, control the crowds. There were school boys and girls in neat blue uniforms grandmothers, with pensive, wizened faces and bored-out earlobes dangling strings of gaily-colored beads; crowds of men and little children, some poorly garbed, others more adequately dressed.

(classes, have already started); other girls in faded, tattered garments, with bright scarves wound about their heads; shaven-headed wives, some carrying babies upon their backs; thin, emaciated

Sixth English Church Organized In Japan

While May Day parades and demonstrations went on nearby, Nakagami Baptist Church, in Tachikawa, Japan, was organized on May 1. Sixth English language Baptist church in Japan. It is located near a sprawling U. S. air base on the outskirts of Tokyo.

The church has 35 charter members and a Sunday school enrollment of 78. In addition to a full program of activities in English, it sponsors Japanese-language Sunday school and Training Union.

Five of the charter members are Japanese, and a young Japanese physicist accepted Christ as Saviour on organization day. The church gives 10 percent of all its offerings to the Japan Baptist Convention's cooperative program and intends to increase the amount.

1st, Louisville Youth Choir Touring Montana

The Youth Choir of First Church, Louisville, left Sunday, May 22, for Montana. Forty-five members, under the direction of William C. Day, minister of music, are performing in schools, churches, and missions in that state.

In preparation for the trip, choir members attended training classes in Baptist history and doctrines, and Mormon beliefs to enable them to be better Christian witnesses while on the summer trip.

In addition to a full program of sacred music, the choir is presenting a fellowship performance which features a folk-singing group.

The Louisville tour group, with the aid of Montana pastors, area missionaries, and the Home Mission Board, planned to hold youth rallies and appear at high schools.

A full day's excursion to Yellowstone National Park is on the agenda also. In addition, the young people hope to visit Mount Rushmore and to "invade the ski slopes of Montana."

First Church, Louisville, Rev. Vernon May, pastor, voted to finance the trip through the church budget. However, the choir members did car washes, baby-sitting jobs, and other odd jobs to supplement the budget, to have an active part in providing for the trip themselves.

Church Begun In Rocky Mountain National Park

There will be a Southern Baptist church for tourists to attend this summer while visiting the Rocky Mountain National Park and the Estes Park area.

Denver Association purchased a three-story building in downtown Estes Park at a cost of $35,000 and an additional $5,000 has been spent for remodeling. The church building is located at 55 Park Lane, right across from the City Fire Station.

George Gaskins, Superintendent of Missions for Denver Association, will be conducting Sunday morning services during the month of June at 10:30 A.M. and during July and August at 8:30 A.M. and 10:30 A.M.

The Home Mission Board of the SBC and The Colorado Baptist General Convention are cooperating with Denver Association in this resort ministry.

The ministry will be a year-round ministry and a qualified full time pastor is being sought.

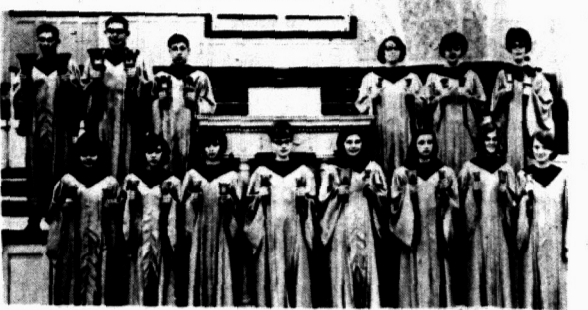

For additional information write George Gaskins, P. O. Box 22005, Denver, Colorado, 80222.

Ross Eckler, director of the United States Census Bureau, has said that the Bureau is considering questioning the American people on religious beliefs in 1970 for the first time. According to Eckler, Roman Catholic and Protestant groups were among those asking that religious questions be included in the census. Jews and Christian Scientists were opposed.

The General Telephone and Electronics Corporation has demonstrated to some 275 educators and security analysts an electronic "blackboard-by-wire" system aimed at the educational market. The system transmits audio and handwriting over regular telephone lines and also provides for questioning from the classroom audience.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON—Covenant Renewed

By Clifton J. Allen
2 Kings 22:1 to 23:30

Manasseh was followed by Amon as king of Judah. His short reign of two years ended when he was treacherously slain by his own servants. His son Josiah then came to the throne, in 640 B.C. He was placed on the throne as an eight-year-old boy, but from his youth onward he manifested wholehearted commitment to uprightness before God and demonstrated great courage in leading the nation back to the fear of the Lord.

The Lesson Explained FINDING THE BOOK OF THE LAW (22:8-13)

Early in Josiah's life, "he began to seek after the God of David his father." At twenty, he "began to purge Judah and Jerusalem." At twenty-six, he turned his attention to the Temple, to repair it in order to encourage and emphasize the worship of God. It was in connection with this work in the Temple that Hilkiah the high priest discovered "the book of the law." This likely was the book of Deuteronomy, or at least a portion of this book. The fact that it had been lost testifies to the neglect of worship and indifference to God's commandments. The book was taken to the king by Shaphan and read before him. When Josiah heard the words of warning and judgment, "he rent his clothes" as he came to a fearful awareness of the waywardness of the nation. He then charged Hilkiah and others to seek from the Lord a fuller understanding of the words that had been read.

RENEWING THE COVENANT (23:1-3)

Josiah took seriously the instruction—the commandments the warnings, and the promises—of the book of the law. He called a great assembly of the elders and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, both the great and the small, and read the words of the book of the law to them. We can be certain that Josiah challenged the people to repent and to fear the Lord.

EXECUTING REFORM

Josiah did not stop with the public ceremony of dedication. He was determined to lead the nation in a full-scale reformation. The king commanded Hilkiah, assisted by other priests, to cleanse the Temple of every sign of Baal worship.

Truths to Live By
The Bible is always relevant.—Josiah and the people of his day discovered that the book of the law, though long neglected and lost in the Temple, spoke with compelling relevance to their own time. People through the centuries have found the Bible always current, always relevant.

The Bible answers man's deepest longings and profoundest questions with the affirmations of the Christian faith, with clear guidance for moral conduct, and with good news about God's saving work in Jesus Christ.

Religious profession must become a dynamic for reform.—Our own nation is very religious—to the degree that more than 80 per cent of the population claims religious affiliation. But religious profession can be formality, hypocrisy, or vanity. It must be tested by the quality of worship that springs from it, by the moral and ethical practices growing out of it, and by the compassionate concern and sacrificial service motivated by it.

NEW PROFESSOR—Dr. Clyde Edward Fant, Jr., pastor of First Church, Ruston, La., has been named associate professor of preaching at Southwestern Seminary, Fort Worth, Tex. A graduate of Baylor University and the seminary, Fant is a Fulbright Scholar and a former teaching fellow at the seminary.

PLANNING and BUILDING AHEAD

TO HELP YOU LIVE BETTER ELECTRICALLY

During 1966, Mississippi Power Company has allocated more than $22 million for construction and expansion of electric facilities. This is a good indicator of the growth of the 23-county area of Southeast Mississippi in which we serve.

Electric power is so vital to our lives that it must be readily available 24 hours a day. Our building program is one way of providing dependable electricity to meet today's and tomorrow's needs.

Importance Of Loving Jesus

By R. A. Tullos, Supt. of Missions, Simpson County

"Do you love me?" John 21:15-17.
"Do you love me?" when asked by Jesus becomes a heart-searching question. When Jesus feels that it is necessary to be thrice-repeated, as in the case with Peter, it became heart-breaking. This passage of Scripture reveals to us the importance that Jesus attaches to love in our relationship to Him.

Both by inference and emphases, we are impressed here with the primacy of love in pleasing Jesus. As His disciples, that is the first thing He wants from us. Without it, as it is without faith, it is impossible to please Him.

We are impressed here, also, with the provisions of love in serving Jesus. Peter must declare his love, in response to Jesus' question, before he is commanded to "feed my sheep," or to "feed my lambs." Love provides the only proper motive for serving Jesus. Jesus provides the opportunity for service to Him only to those who love Him. This quality is essential in those to whom Jesus will entrust His sheep. And, also, love through service provides the only real proof as to the genuineness of our profession. It were as if Jesus were saying in that thrice-repeated commission: "You say you love me, Peter. Prove it by feeding my lambs and my sheep."

"I love you Mother", said little Nell
"I love you more than tongue can tell."
But she sulked and pouted all that day
Till her mother was glad when she went to play.
"I love you, mother", said sturdy John,
But forgetting his work, his cap went on.
And off he went to the garden swing,
And left her the wood and the water to bring.
"I love you, Mother", said thoughtful Fan;
"Today I'll help you all I can,
How glad I am school doesn't keep."
And she rocked the baby 'til he fell asleep.
"We love you, Mother", again they said,
Three little children on their way to bed.
But how do you think that mother guessed
Which of the three really loved her best?

We are impressed, also, as Jesus continued to talk to Peter of the price of love in following Jesus. Vv 18-22. Love is not cheap. It is very costly. If we really love Jesus, it could cost us liberty or life, or both. That is what it cost Peter. Surely, it will always cost us the price of occupying the position and lot in life which He assigns to us. Verses 20-22. It might involve taking the lowly place while others occupy a more enviable position. This we should do without jealousy, or complaint. If we love Him, this we will do. This, too, is the price of love.
